

Yellow Fever Convalescent's

After combating a siege of yellow fever and overcoming the disease itself, the victim is left weak, emaciated, and in a delicate condition of prostration.

Convalescence from yellow fever is a critical period, and only proper and careful treatment can prevent the resulting after-effects which so often produce ailments that sometimes terminate fatally.

After yellow fever and during convalescence, the patient should be given a treatment of Vinol, our cod liver preparation without oil, which is absolutely the very best tonic-reconstructor known.

It is delicious to the taste, sharpens the appetite, calms and strengthens the irritable weak stomach, promotes easy and perfect digestion of wholesome and nourishing food, and soothes, cleanses and heals the inflamed and sore membranes, and induces restful, refreshing sleep.

Thus, the nerves are quieted and invigorated, normal body weight and strength is gradually restored, the blood is purified and made plentiful, the thin body is fattened, and the whole system is built up, and kept up to perfect health and vigor.

Vinol is not a patent or "secret" medicine. Everything in it is plainly stated on every bottle label. We are personally familiar with every particle in it, and absolutely know that if properly used for a reasonable length of time, it will do the user the greatest possible good.

Bear in mind that we sell Vinol with the distinct understanding and guarantee that it shall cost you nothing if you derive no benefit from its use.

We will return to you every cent paid us for Vinol if it fails to do for you what we claim it will.

We stake our name and reputation on Vinol, and only real knowledge of the potency of Vinol could induce us to guarantee it to you, our neighbors, friends and acquaintances; and you are absolutely secure in putting complete faith and confidence in us and our offer.

Begin a treatment of Vinol to-day on our guarantee.

WILLIAMS MAY BE DEPOSED AS LEADER

Hearst, Lamar, and Others Are Said to Be After His Scalp.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—The New York World says: John Sharp Williams is in grave danger of being deposed as democratic leader in the House of Representatives, as the result of a serious party row. W. R. Hearst and his followers and the adherents of Representatives Lamar, of Florida, and Shackelford, of Missouri, will be arrayed against the Williams forces.

The row grows out of the reported intention of Williams to discipline Lamar and Shackelford for their alleged bolting of the democratic caucus last year on the railroad rate question, and for reporting to the House the Hearst rate bill.

Lamar and Shackelford are threatened with removal from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce as punishment. Leader Williams has completed his committee of democrats, and they have been turned over to Speaker Cannon, who will announce them to-morrow or Tuesday. If Lamar and Shackelford be not re-appointed Lamar and other democrats will denounce Williams on the floor of the House, and will organize a campaign to depose him as minority leader.

Taking Chances.

A small boy had been punished and in consequence was feeling at enmity with all the world, but with his father in particular. When he came to say his prayers at night he gabbled through them at a high rate of speed, and while asking for the customary blessing on all the other members of the family, including the cat, he left out his offending parent.

His mother understood, but thought it best to "appeal to his better self."

"Harold," she said sweetly, "what about papa? You forget, dear."

"Didn't. Don't want papa blessed!"

"Why, Harold, when you love him so! Just think, dear. Papa has gone downtown now, and would you feel if he got lost or hurt because you hadn't prayed for him?"

This rather worked on the boy's mind, and slowly he began to clamor out of bed, when just as he got on his knees he heard the familiar click of his father's key in the lock. "I guess I'll risk it!" he announced and quick as a wink jumped back into bed.—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Sanson Fawnd the Guillotine.

The Sansons have a place in French history, not only because they continued so long to hold their odious office, but because two of their number, a father and son, held office during the evil days of the reign of terror, when they were kept so busily engaged with their guillotine. The last of the Sanson dynasty was dismissed from his post in the reign of Louis Philippe, in 1847, under remarkable circumstances. Although he had inherited a comfortable fortune from his father, the executioner of the revolution, he got into pecuniary difficulties and was guilty of pawing his guillotine, surely the most lugubrious pledge ever taken by mortal pawnbroker. An order came from the procurator general for the execution of a criminal, and the necessary apparatus was not forthcoming. The prison authorities had perforce to get it out of pawn, and the execution took place. But the last of the Sansons was informed that his services would no longer be required. What became of him afterward does not appear to be known.

Quite the Contrary.

Tess—I certainly was surprised to hear that Maud was married. Jess—Yes, it was rather unexpected. Tess—Her family's quite incensed, I hear. They say her husband is a man of absolutely no family. Jess—That's all wrong. He was a widower with four children.—Philadelphia Press.

A Shakespeare Legend.

Visiting Stratford-on-Avon recently, writes a correspondent, I met with the following legend, which may or may not be based on fact. It was told to me by a man whose father had lived ninety years, having had the story handed down from his great-grandfather, who had lived 104 years. The story was as follows: At the grammar school at Stratford-on-Avon, which Shakespeare attended, a dog named Fidler was a great favorite with the boys. But in the course of time the dog grew so old and decrepit that the head master, who was a clergyman, ordered his clerk to hang the dog.

Upon this becoming known in the school one of the boys chalked on one of the outer office doors the following lines:

Now that poor Fidler has grown so old
He can no longer bark
He is condemned by the parson
To be hung by the clerk.

The head master, seeing these lines, demanded that the boy who had written them should hold up his hand, and William Shakespeare did so. The other boys were dismissed and left Shakespeare, as they thought, to have a good "whacking." But instead of this the head master gave him 5 shillings and promised him that Fidler should die a natural death.—London Chronicle.

BIG DRY DOCK IS URGED FOR PENSACOLA

Rear Admiral Capps Makes Recommendation in Annual Report.

The Montgomery Advertiser of yesterday morning, contained the following dispatch:

Washington, Dec. 10.—Provision for construction of a dry dock at Pensacola capable of accommodating the largest ships in the navy is urged by Rear Admiral Capps of the navy in his annual report made public at the navy department to-day. The necessity for a large dock at this point arises, it is pointed out, from the strategic importance of Pensacola.

Regarding docking facilities elsewhere on the Atlantic coast, the chief constructor says there are only two docks on this coast in which it is possible to dock large battleships and cruisers and that until the docks under construction at Portsmouth, N. H., New York, League Island, Norfolk, Charleston are completed, the work of the bureau of construction and repair is performed at a disadvantage.

The report says that while it is anticipated that the cost of construction of the Connecticut in a navy yard would exceed the contract price of the Louisiana, the sister vessel under construction at the Newport News Ship Building and Dry Dock company, every effort is being made to keep the cost within the limit fixed by congress and it is hoped that it will not be necessary to recommend an extension of the limit of the cost in this case. The date for completion of the two vessels will not differ to any considerable extent.

LEAVE FOR THE RE-UNION OF VETERANS

Delegates Who Will Represent Camp Ward at Jacksonville Will Leave This Morning.

Delegates from Camp Ward, No. 10, U. C. V., to the reunion of Confederate Veterans in Jacksonville December 13 and 14 will leave this morning for that city to participate in the ceremonies. The delegates are as follows: D. B. Reed, C. V. Thompson, John L. Pinney, E. C. Bonifay, Joseph McVoy, General George B. Reese and J. N. Giles.

The meeting in Jacksonville this year promises to be a notable one in the history of Florida veterans and elaborate arrangements for their entertainment have been made by the people of Jacksonville.

A notable feature of the meeting will be an exhibition of the old battle flags recently returned to the state by the United States government, and it is expected that the old color bearer of the seventh regiment will also be on hand with the colors of that regiment which he brought home with him and has had in his custody ever since. This will probably be the last time that these flags will ever appear at a Confederate reunion, as General Foster is preparing to have them displayed in a specially prepared case at the state capital.

The old boys who wore the Gray in the Sixties are expecting to have the time of their lives at Jacksonville, and all indications point to the fact that their expectations will be realized.

Long Living.

The Key that Unlocks the Door to The men of eighty-five and ninety years of age are not the rotund well fed, but the spare men, who live on a slender diet. Be as careful as he will, however, a man past middle age, will occasionally eat too much or of some article of food not suited to his constitution, and will need a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets to cleanse and invigorate his stomach and regulate his liver and bowels. When this is done there is no reason why the average man should not live to old age. For sale by all druggists.

Tom Hood's Test.

The following story is one which Tom Hood was rather fond of relating. He was once asked to contribute to a new journal, not exactly gratuitously, but at a small advance upon nothing. He accepted the terms conditionally—that is to say, provided the principle could be properly carried out.

Accordingly he wrote to his butcher, baker and other tradesmen, informing them that it was necessary for the sake of cheap literature and the interest of the reading public that they should in future furnish him with their several commodities at a trifling percentage above cost price.

It will be sufficient to quote the answer of the butcher: Sir—Respecting your note, cheap literature be damned! Butchers must live as other people, and if so be you or the reader in public wants to have meat at prime cost you must buy your own businesses and kill yourselves. I remain, etc., JEM STOKES.

Fashions in Beards.

English history is rich in examples of the way in which fashion in beards has changed from time to time. The spies sent out by Harold reported that the Norman invaders "did almost seem to be priests, because they had all their face and both lips shaven," which is confirmed in the Bayeux tapestry. It was to distinguish themselves from their hated conquerors that the English wore their hair long. Stow speaks of long hair as well as beards in Henry I's reign. "Men contended with women in their long hair, and when this decayed through old age they knit about their heads certain rolls and braidings of false hair." The monk Wulstan described the practice of wearing the hair long as "immoral, criminal and beastly." When one of his long haired flock knelt for his blessing, it is said that he would whip out a knife and cut off as many of the tresses that lay under his consecrating hand as he could manage in the rather limited time at his disposal.

London and New York.

The contrast between society in London and New York is not so great as many suppose. There are more low dresses and diamond tiaras in London and more smart, tidy women in New York; more beards in London and more clean shaven chins in Manhattan. There are larger hotels in New York and bigger shops; there are red pillar boxes in London and smaller gray ones in the city on the island. But these things are small details. In the main, both cities are much alike, and the men and women behave in much the same way. We have no streets to compare with Fifth avenue, and they have no park to compare with Regent's park and no Westminster abbey! But we drive out and dine out just the same, we eat and think and dress and read just the same, or anyway so much alike we seem like one big family party, which is just as it should be.—London Black and White

The Great Fox

Eighty-five per cent. of the writing machines used in Pensacola are Fox Typewriters.

The Fox is a higher grade Typewriter than any other. It will do more work, more varied work, do it easier, has greater durability than any other blind typewriter manufactured. I am proving this assertion every day.

I want an opportunity to prove it in your office, and am perfectly willing to undertake it without any expense to you.

The Underwood is the U. S. government's favorite and used exclusively by them, because it is the best visible typewriter made. The handy little Blickenderfer is the best writing machine for carrying around with you made.

All of these machines are on display at the Bruce Sporting Goods Store, who also has a fine stock of Guns, Small Rifles, Bicycles, Tires, Bicycle Supplies, Footballs, Punching Bags, Air Rifles, Phonographs and Records, Boxing Gloves, Fishing Tackle and everything you can need to please old folks and children.

Buy your child's Christmas Bicycle from Bruce. He was burned out and needs a lot of guns that were scratched and slightly damaged during the fire, will now be sold at cost.
